

The Faculties and the Academy

The Academy learning environment is made up of a series of Faculties. These Faculties are Business, Humanities and Enterprise; Communications; Physical and Natural Science; Maths and Information Technology; and Arts, Music and Industrial Design. Each Academy working day is split into two sessions and students spend one session within a single Faculty and then move into a different Faculty for the second session. This style of learning ensures that students have sufficient time to study each subject in depth and it minimises any disruption into learning time. In addition to the teaching faculties there is also a resource provision which is the base for the Academy's Designated Special Provision and much of our inclusion work.
